Three Salve Regina Girls Answer the Call of the Lay Apostolate

The call of the lay apostolate has received a generous response from Virginia Gonsalves of Newport, R. I. On September fourth, this 1962 graduate of Salve Regina College sailed from New York for La Ceiba, Honduras, where she will assist the Sisters of Mercy, Province of Providence, in the apostolic work among the Spanish Hondurans. Miss Gonsalves, a Spanish major and member of the Sigma Phi and Kappa Gamma Pi honor societies, will teach on the secondary level at Instituto Maria Regina. An active member of the Legion of Mary of St. Mary's parish, and a zealous promoter of the college Mission Club activities, this young lady will devote a year to furthering God's kingdom in Central America.

Melville, Louisiana, was the mission field assigned this summer to Irene Rogers of West Hartford and Catherine Sullivan of New London. These Salve Regina seniors participated in a three-week volunteer project sponsored by the Grail Movement of Loveland, Ohio. Both served as lay catechists and instructors of arts and crafts.

Enthronement of Sacred Heart Renewed at Salve

Appropriately, the feast of St. Margaret Mary has been selected to mark the renewal of the enthronement of the Sacred Heart at Salve Regina. On October 17, at the outdoor shrine at Moore Hall, Rev. Albert Evans, S.S.C.C. will conduct the ceremony re-dedicating the college and its associates to the love and devotion to the Sacred Heart.

Students and faculty members will participate in the program which will include a sermon and short instruction explaining the origin and meaning of the enthronement practice, the blessing of pictures, Act of Consecration, and prayers for living and deceased alumnae. Class representatives will place roses at the shrine after the reading of the twelve promises made by the Sacred Heart to St. Margaret Mary. Following this official tribute, Salve Regina College may continue to turn confidently to Christ for the fulfillment of His promise: "I shall bless every place where an image of My Heart shall be exposed and honored."

Salve Regina College Welcomes Student Body

Visiting lecturer—Mr. Eric von Kuehnelt-Leddihn opens lecture series.

Author Cites Globe Happenings

The history department will launch the first semester's cultural program this month by sponsoring a lecture series on world affairs. On October 8, 9, and 10, in four lectures daily, Mr. Eric von Kuehnelt-Leddihn of Tyrol, Austria, will present his views of current developments in Europe, Asia, Africa, and Latin America.

Mr. von Kuehnelt-Leddihn, widely traveled and extensively educated, has recently completed an Asiatic tour, during which he recorded the first hand information and on-the-spot impressions essential to any precise assessment of present-day national and political scenes.

As author and lecturer, Mr. von Kuehnelt-Leddihn aims at promoting better understanding between nations. A linguist of uncommon ability, he has authored several books and contributed to numerous American and foreign journals. He describes himself as a Catholic with catholic interests, and, utilizing this broad experience and international viewpoint, leaves his listeners enriched by extended horizons and a more perceptive understanding of the contemporary world picture.

Salve Regina College's sixteenth year of academic existence opened on September 16 with the arrival of 125 freshmen. Junior residents were present to greet the new students who boost the total enrollment to a new high of 523.

Social orientation for the week included a welcome greeting at freshman assembly by Sister Mary Hilda, R.S.M., president of the college, in Mercy Hall; a faculty reception tea for freshmen and juniors in the Ochre Court state dining room, dorm parties in the residence halls, a barbecue on Ocean Terrace, and a freshman mixer on Friday in the gymnasium.

The academic orientation program began with registration, counseling lectures, and distribution of class schedules. Three days were devoted to the administration of freshman college proficiency examinations. Classes were held according to schedule on Wednesday, after the celebration of Holy Mass by the College Chaplain.

Faculty Grows

Eight new instructors comprise the faculty additions or replacements. The theology department welcomed Fr. John M. Egan, O.P., S.T.L., of Barry College, Florida, and Sister Mary Olga, R.S.M., A.M., of Mount St. Mary Academy, Fall River. Added to the English department is Sister Mary Andrea, R.S.M., A.M., of Bishop Feehan High School, Attleboro, Mass. Sister Mariel, R.S.M., B.S., graduate of St. Joseph Hospital School of Nursing and C. U. of America, is assistant instructor in the nursing division.

New lay faculty members include Mr. Leo J. Bottari, A.M., instructor in Biology; Dr. Marta de la Portilla, Ph.D., Spanish; Miss Lois Prosser, R.N., and Miss Jane Cowsill, R.N., Nursing.

Mr. Bottari leaves a teaching post at St. Joseph's High School in South Bend, Indiana. A biology major, he is a graduate of Stonehill College, with a master's degree from the University of Notre Dame, where he is at present a doctoral candidate.

Dr. de la Portilla, formerly of Catholic University of Havana, Cuba, holds doctorates from the University of Havana, University of Madrid, and the Catholic University of Villaneuva.

In This Our Day . . .

Since the first Vatican Council, the Bishops of Rome have been in the forefront of Catholic Ecumenism. Pope Leo XIII wrote that one of the purposes of his pontificate was to prepare for the reconciliation of Christians. Within the past eleven years the Holy See has been vitally concerned with this reunion movement. On December 20, 1949, the Sacred Congregation of the Holy Office issued instructions relative to the ecumenical movement. In the Holy Year of 1950, Pope Pius XII pleaded "for the great pardon and the great return." In 1959, Pope John XXIII announced the Second Vatican Council.

As American Catholics and college students, we are privileged to live in this era of Christianity. More than this, Pope John summons us to a substantial participation in this convocation. Each of us is the image of the church. Our prime duty is to project a true image within our own souls. As a result, Christian unity will be achieved on campus, at home, in our academic and social living. It is not for us to resolve the dogmatic problems of the council. But in our own particular environment, in our everyday encounters with Catholics and non-Catholics alike, we can become cognizant of our many common bonds and bear meaningful witness to Christ.

The time for complacency is past; the testing of baptismal and confirmation promises is at hand. We can utilize the gifts of the Holy Ghost in our effort to understand differences in background, education, nationality, and race. This, within our own sphere of living, can be our contribution toward unity. We must rise to the challenge of our generation. It is our obligation to communicate our peace, our devotedness to truth, our unflinching faith, and our concept of God.

That October, the month of the rosary, should be chosen for the convocation, is significant. On the eleventh, we celebrate the feast of Our Lady's Maternity, confident that Mary's maternal interest will manifest itself now as in every moment of the Church's history. She was present on the first Pentecost; her rosary stemmed the Albigensian heresy; her intercession saved Christianity from the Turks. Let us, then, enlisting the aid of Our Lady, pray her rosary that the aims of the ecumenical council be achieved. Thereby shall we be noteworthy for our allegiance to our Holy Father, the Rock whereon we stand.

At The Outset . . .

The pursuit of a college education should be an adventure of the mind, an enrichment of the intellect. It should be an experience within a framework of the arts and sciences, which stems from a gradual maturing of judgment based upon an independence of thought resulting from the examination of great works and the stimulating ideas of the past and present.

This process requires discipline and perseverance; it means establishing a groundwork of systematic and clearly defined study habits. The mind must lift itself to more meaningful, to more intricate problems, to more challenging material. The everyday assignment well done, the overall view clearly visualized, the thought question comprehensively answered—these are the guideposts toward developing intellectual curiosity and individual scholarship.

Strange as it may seem, the point of contact between the arts and sciences, the human mind, and the actual and more gratifying development of individual scholarship lies within the golden span of moments of leisure. The latter is not synonymous with idleness. On the contrary, leisure begins when we have time to think of the worth and purpose of what we are doing. As Aristotle pointed out, the words "school" and "scholarship" are derived from schole, leisure. The college illustrates this when it places a voluntary liberal education at the beginning of adult life. This directive toward maturity will have its reward not only in an individual sense, but it should also serve to establish a vision of life that can be shared with others.

Thus, our college education is in our hands to mold as we will. Its value cannot be computed in credit hours or in courses completed satisfactorily. Between the subject matter and the professor, there lies a third factor—ourselves. Our attitude, our aptitude, our approach will influence the net result. The time to consider exactly our position as college students is NOW. The spiritual, the intellectual, and the social—all of these, in balance and in due order—are sources of growth and well-springs of maturity.

With these thoughts in mind, let us begin with courage and with enthusiasm. Like Keats, we can travel "in the realms of gold" and explore the heights and depths of knowledge until in some consummate moment, we, too, shall be "silent, upon a peak in Darien."

Dear Students:

As I sit here at my desk and gaze at Our Lady's beautiful image, I salute her under her glorious title, "Salve Regina, Mater Misericordiae," and I ask her to welcome you for me, to give you a message that will be timely, forceful, enduring. This is her response to my petition:

Salve Regina is dedicated to you, its students. The aim and ambition of each faculty member and each official of the college is to help you to realize your ideal, to assist you to develop your God-given talents so admirably that you will be ready to meet the challenge of a changing world.

The educational philosophy of Salve Regina College, then, is to prepare you to assume a responsible role in the world of today by learning "to put first things first," according to the principles of sound Christian philosophy, and thereby to be prepared to make a real contribution to the world in which you will live.

With this "look-to-the-end" philosophy daily practiced, your college days will be filled with success and happiness; your parents will be overjoyed, your Alma Mater will be grateful; God will be glorified.

May the intellectual stamina required for this noble endeavor be yours during the coming scholastic year and during all the years of your life. Keep close to Mary, saluting her daily as Salve Regina Mater Misericordiae.

Sodality Announces New Officers and Program for Coming Year

A new panel of officers will guide the Sodality of Maria Regina through the current academic year. Selected in the May elections were: prefect, Mary McCarthy; vice-prefect, Barbara Mondo; secretary, Diane Dufresne; director of probationists, Alice Oliviera.

In six areas sodalists were active during the vacation months. Two delegates, Mary McCarthy and Alice Oliveira represented the college at the Summer Congress of the Lay Apostolate in New York City. Various colleges present contributed new ideas which the Sodality hopes to integrate in this year's program.

Salve Regina Sodalists earnestly encourage membership in the Sodality. This is one of the most highly indulgenced associations in the Church, and the Sodality of Maria Regina is an important center of activity at the college. On November 3, 1947, it was affiliated with the Prima Primaria, the Primary Sodality of the Roman College under the direction of the Society of Jesus, whose Father John Leunis originated the Sodality at Rome in 1563. Through membership, the Sodalist tries, by following a permanent rule and way of life, to sanctify himself and his neighbor and to spread the Catholic Church insofar as he is able.

Salve Regina's Sodality is broken down into units called cells. Each cell is made up of a small group of Sodalists with one member presiding. The cells are independently operated and plan individual activities and meetings. Corporate activities, in which all cells participate, are planned by the officers of the Sodality, who are also responsible for general government. On the agenda for the 1962-63 program are a tea for new members, a Sodality newsheet edited by sophomores, four seminars on theological and moral problems which will be open to the entire student body, a closed retreat for Sodalists, and an annual Christmas party for poor children. Certain activities, such as this Christmas project, may be shared by non-Sodalists who wish to contribute to the undertaking.

Farewell To Past Dean . . .

Sister Mary Constance, R.S.M. leaves for new assignment.

After fourteen years of devoted service at Salve Regina College, Sister Mary Constance has been appointed to the office of superior at Saint Xavier Convent in Providence. In her capacity as Dean of Women, she endeavored to direct and advise us wisely and well, with a deep personal concern for each of us. We are, indeed, conscious of the debt of gratitude we owe to her. Therefore, we wish to express our appreciation publicly in this issue of our school paper. Best wishes to you, Sister, from all of us at Salve Regina College.

*From The S. G. O.
President's Desk*

Dear Freshmen,

The Student Council welcomes the Class of '66 to Salve Regina. We hope that the next four years will be happy and worthwhile years for you.

The members of Student Council will make a special effort, within the first few weeks, to meet and talk to the new students. Your views are important to us, and we hope that your voice will be heard.

It is the function of Student Council to serve as the intermediary between the students and the faculty and administration of Salve Regina. For Student Government to succeed, we must have your support and co-operation.

As soon as time permits, you will have explained to you the rules and regulations of Student Government. These rules are a necessary part of real student government, and strict accordance with the same is required of each student. Pre-supposing your cooperation in this area, we look forward to representing the student body in each phase of student life.

Remember that you are welcome to attend our weekly meetings.

Inviting your ideas, and anticipating your full cooperation, I again wish you every success in your college years.

Sincerely,

Marie Robinson

FORMER FACULTY MEMBERS FILL NEW POSITIONS

While we welcome the new members of the faculty, we are nonetheless mindful of former members who left Salve Regina this past academic year. Reverend Christopher Johnson, O.P. is currently teaching at Albertus Magnus College in New Haven. Sister Mary Evangelista, R.S.M., who served the college devotedly since its beginnings, has retired from teaching and is stationed at Saint Xavier Convent in Providence. Sister Marie Pierre, R.S.M., has returned to Our Lady of Cincinnati College as professor of French. Mount Saint Mary Academy, Fall River, claims Sister Mary Donald, R.S.M. as biology teacher. Mrs. Lawrence Donovan, the former Margaret West, who was a member of the nursing division, is living in Bridgeport, Connecticut. Doctor Peter Rotar has joined the department of agronomy and soil science at the University of Hawaii. Doctor Elizabeth Fariens of the theology department has returned to the Mid-west to continue her teaching career.

These faculty members, together with Sister Mary Constance, R.S.M., each contributed to the growth and development of the college. The period of time spent here varies with each; nevertheless, many students came within the sphere of their influence. In this first issue of Ebb Tide for the new school year, the students wish to express their gratitude and best wishes to those who have left us for other fields of endeavor.

Semi-Formal Dance — Mercy Hall

Formal Dance — Shamrock Cliff

... Welcome To New

Sister Mary Donald, R.S.M. succeeds Sister Mary Constance as Dean of Women. Sister is no stranger at Salve Regina College. Her work with us in English composition and world literature, as well as in upper division English courses, has established her reputation for excellence among us. As members of the student body, we extend a sincere welcome to Sister in her new capacity. We know that in her office in the faculty house across the road, we shall find one who will give us of her time, understanding, and her counsel.

New Dean of Women—Sister Mary Donald, R.S.M. will direct student body.

European Travelers Record Thoughts and Impressions

Marguerite Williamson smiles her appreciation of "gay Paree."

Happy recipient of the Alliance Française scholarship last spring was Marguerite Williamson. Awarded a study session in France Miss Williamson returned brimming with enthusiasm from the experience. She writes:

Three little words spell out the formula for a summer to be remembered; "Go to France." It is almost impossible to enumerate the excitement, the thrills and the interest provided by my six weeks of travel in this fascinating country. Beginning with the experience of meeting wonderfully interesting, different, and stimulating persons, my trip was a series of memorable happenings.

Strangely enough, my initial reaction to Paris, as I drove by bus from Le Bourget Airport to Les Invalides, was one of disappointment. This was due, no doubt to my weariness: a luggage mixup had caused a wearisome delay, and twenty-four sleepless hours had dulled my appreciation for anything but rest. However, Paris soon made up for this unfortunate introduction. By day, it was breathlessly exciting; by night, it was incredibly beautiful.

My home in France was the Alliance Française. Here, each day, for two hours, I attended an advanced course. Then followed a whirlwind of tours during which the beauties and glories of France were unfolded: Versailles, les Champs Elysees, the Eiffel Tower, les Invalides, the Louvre, are just a few of the magic names that unbelievably became realities for me.

Highlighting the whole program was the personal contact with the French people. The opportunity to speak with them in their native tongue was an invaluable experience. All reserve disappeared when we learned to know and understand each other. The French proved to be charming, wonderful people. It was an unforgettable summer!

Equally thrilled by the wonders of far-away places was Noreen Ryan, a junior from New Haven, Conn. A two-month's private tour took her to the nine major European countries. From her nearly-inexhaustible store of memories, she selects a moment of poignant drama: a visit to Berlin on the Fourth of July. Her personal experience in that city of tensions brings its tragedy close as she recalls:

It was the anniversary of my own country's treasured independence. Perhaps this fact contributed to the depression which gripped me as I entered Germany's city without hope—Russian Berlin. The day was dark and rainy, but it seemed only a fitting reflection of our mental state. The gaiety and excited anticipation which—regardless of weather conditions—is part of the contagious, light-hearted "tourist spirit" were completely missing.

Here was no opportunity to roam leisurely through unfamiliar streets or to enjoy the friendliness and welcome of a people eager to prove the superiority of their country's hospitality. Instead, we walked quickly and uneasily for hours, obedient to the warning not to talk with anyone.

At the Brandenburg Gate, the atmosphere was intensified. Groups of Berliners—free and tyrannized—faced each other despondently in a dismal rain. A busload of U. S. soldiers paused to photograph the famed archway. Suddenly, as the bus blocked the view of the armed Volpo Police, a young university student turned to me and muttered, "This is the German calamity. We hate them for this!" At that moment, the bus moved and the eyes of the Volpo were fixed on the student. As he bolted in fear, I thanked God for the gifts symbolized by American Independence.

Visit to Berlin impressed Noreen Ryan.

Students Elect S. G. O. Officers For Coming Year

Marie Robinson, president of S.G.O.

Marie Robinson, newly elected Student Government Organization president, hails from East Providence, Rhode Island. An English major, she is participating in the teacher-training practice program in Newport. Miss Robinson served as president of her sophomore class and as a member of the Student Council in her junior year. In these positions, she has already demonstrated her unusual qualities of leadership.

S. R. C. Delegates Visit Conventions At D. C. & Miami

Salve Regina College was represented at several major summer conventions. At Washington, D. C., from August 29 to September 9, Sister Mary Christopher, R.S.M. and Sister Mary Norbert, R.S.M., members of the sociology department, attended three meetings: the American Sociological Convention, the American Catholic Sociological Convention, and the Fifth World Congress of Sociology. During the ten day period, the Sisters attended lectures and conferences held by internationally eminent sociologists, in which the complex social problems peculiar to modern society were discussed and analyzed.

Ann Bruton, winner of the Christmas card contest sponsored by the National American Home Economics Association was the guest of that organization at their Miami Beach convention in June. The originality of Miss Bruton's design entitled her to the expense-free trip and participation in all sessions and activities of the meeting. Accompanying her as Salve Regina's representative was Patricia Coyle of Washington, D. C. Both students will be prepared to incorporate into Salve Regina College's Chapter of the A. H. E. A. the ideas and suggestions advanced in the sessions by the nation's leading Home Economics experts and advisers.

The new slate of Student Government officers, elected last April by the entire student body, took up their duties at the first semester meeting on September 27th. Chosen as the official representative of the organization on all occasions was Marie Robinson, a senior resident student from East Providence, R. I. In this capacity she will preside over all meetings of the student council, and will act as the link between students, faculty, and administration.

Assisting Miss Robinson, in the position of vice-president, is Marie Kenney of Newport, also of the senior class. She will share the responsibility of stimulating and coordinating campus activities, developing and maintaining school spirit, making rules and regulations governing order on and off the campus, and coping generally with various matters of student welfare.

A junior, Agnes Coughlin of Wethersfield, Conn., will serve as secretary for the Student Government Organization, and Mary Bisson of Newport will act as treasurer. Added to the ordinary duties of their office will be the charge of checking demerits and issuing penalty slips.

Election to these positions automatically makes these four students members of the Student Council. They will work in conjunction with the prefect of the Sodality, Mary McCarthy; the senior delegate of N.F.C.C.S.; the delegate of U.S.N. S.A.; the president and two representatives of each class. In matters concerning house regulations, they will also have the assistance of the House Committee who will represent the resident students.

Sister Mary Donald, R.S.M., newly appointed Dean of Women, will serve this year as the official representative of the faculty in all matters pertaining to student government.

S. G. O. meetings will be held monthly at a regular assembly period, and Student Council meetings will be held weekly at a time to be designated.

Along with congratulations for the signal honor accorded to these officers and delegates go the loyal pledges of the entire student body for maximum cooperation in all their undertakings.

Marie Kenney, S.G.O.'s vice-president.

Marie Kenney, a native Newporter, and graduate of St. Catherine Academy, holds the second position of importance in this year's Student Government Organization. In preparation for a career as a dietitian, Miss Keeney is majoring in Foods and Nutrition. She has already won laurels because of her capable performance as vice-president of her junior class.

Patron of Peace Lecture Given On October 7th

A topic both spiritual and timely was the subject of an address scheduled at Ochre Court for Sunday, October 7, at three o'clock. Rev. Leo Clifford, O.F.M., widely known as an inspiring and perceptive lecturer, spoke there on Saint Francis of Assisi, patron and advocate of peace.

Father Clifford visited Salve Regina under the sponsorship of the Misses Lillian, Mary and Gertrude McMahon, long-time friends of the college, of Newport, Rhode Island, who offered the opportunity in memory of their parents, Dennis and Mary Leahy McMahon.

Admission to the lecture was free, and the public was cordially invited.

Students Try Teaching Skills

"Operation Schoolmarm" is in full swing. On September 5, sixty-three Salve Regina seniors crossed thresholds in seven local schools of the Newport public school system and met the battery of the curious, appraising eyes of Newport's youth for the first time.

Emotions and reactions varied as these young ladies embarked upon the full semester of practice teaching requisite for obtaining a bachelor's degree. Forty-six began their teaching experience on the elementary level, meeting pupils from grades one to six in four elementary schools of the area. Seventeen, interested in secondary education, were introduced to this age group at Thompson Junior High School and Rogers Senior High School. Until the end of January, when the first semester closes, all will have the opportunity of applying to actual classroom situations those principles, philosophies, theories and procedures gleaned from the teaching-training courses offered those who minor in education.

Enthusiasm runs high among the student teachers. Majors in such fields as English, History, Mathematics, Sciences, Languages, Sociology, or Social Studies, they return to campus once a week for courses, and regale their comrades with accounts of how it feels to be "on the other side of the desk."

Nearly every student reports that she faces each teaching assignment with confidence. In addition to the procedure courses with which she has previously been fortified, each student has the constant guidance of a supervising teacher, especially certified for this position by the State of Rhode Island. Student teachers are also visited in their classrooms at least twice during the semester by Mr. George L. McKim, director of the student-teaching program at Salve Regina. Mr. McKim, who also teaches, in the Adult Education Program, the course which is required for supervisory certification, considers these visits of prime importance in the program. They are followed by individual interviews and three-level seminars in which the problems of classroom procedures in elementary, junior high, and senior high schools are discussed and, if possible, resolved.

While the student teachers glibly discuss child psychology, pupil-participation, or methods of recapitulation, they invariably describe their classroom experience in a down-to-earth cliché: "In a teacher's day, there's never a dull moment."

WELCOME TO DADS — October 26 - 28!
