Changes to MA Humanities

Proposed additions are underlined

The Master of Arts in Humanities is an interdisciplinary program that seeks to foster a broad understanding of the qualitative aspects of life and culture through study in the core disciplines of history, literature, philosophy, and religion. Electives provide opportunities for deeper study and the application of humanities insights to political and social issues, international relations, counseling, and psychology. The course of study is intended for individuals who want to broaden their intellectual and cultural horizons. It also serves as excellent preparation for the Ph.D. degree in the Humanities.
