ANNOUNCEMENTS

Salve will be holding its thirty-fourth Commencement exercises Sunday, June 3, at 2:00 p.m. on the east lawn of O'Hare Academic Center. Five-hundred-three students will receive degrees.

Mr. Jeremiah C. Lynch, Jr., attorney at law at Moore Virgadamo and Lynch, Ltd. and past Chairman of Salve's Board of Trustees, will be awarded the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws from Salve.

Sister Lucille McKillop will deliver the address to this year's graduating class and Sister M. Therese Antone will induct the '84 graduates into the College's Alumni Association.

Wendy Ashcroft, a nursing major from North Dighton, Mass., is this year's valedictorian. Wendy will graduate summa cum laude (highest honors). In all, 101 students will graduate with honors, including five summa cum laude, 34 magna cum laude and 62 cum laude.

One-hundred-eighty-seven students will receive master's degrees, 305 will receive baccalaureate degrees and 11 will be awarded associate degrees.

eligible for membership and wishes to become a member of the Society should give his or her name to a member of the Religious Studies Department.

The name of the Society derives from the first letters of three Greek words, Theos (God), Anthropos (Humankind), and Koinonia (Community) - the three areas of primary concern to students of religion.

For further information about requirements for admission contact the Religious Studies Department at ext. 328.

Salve recently held its tenth annual Sports Award Ceremony in Ochre Court. Michaëla Barbato and Clifton Carney received the Hibernian Award for their outstanding athletic accomplishments. Each was presented a trophy by the Ancient Order of Hibernians - Division I. The Newport group has sponsored this award for the past seven years.

Michaela, a junior majoring in Education, was co-captain of the women's basketball team and tri-captain of the most successful women's softball team in Salve's history.

Clifton, a junior majoring in Criminal Justice, was co-captain of the men's basketball team and second baseman for the men's baseball team which won ten games, Salve's highest season total.

Sportsmanship Awards went to seniors Elaine Cummings and William Graziano. This award is given to senior varsity athletes who have been selected by the coaches as representing the values of the College: respect and deportment in athletic competition. Elaine was captain of the women's soccer team and William, a relief pitcher on the men's baseball team, was prize state champion in the long jump and high hurdles.

Cited for their contributions to the College's athletic program were seniors Kathleen Amorosa, Joan Gerrity, Kathy McGovern and Elaine Cummings.

Mark Zarek, a junior majoring in Management, was the recipient of the Charles R. Gonzalez Award for his achievement in baseball. The award is in memory of Charles R. Gonzalez, a National League baseball coach who was instrumental in the recruitment of Hispanic players for American baseball teams. Mr. Gonzalez is the late father of Mrs. Carmen Mottinger, a Salve staff member.

Among the most memorable events of the 1983-1984 seasons were the accomplishments of individuals such as the double All-American, Eloise Evans who became the New England Women's Champion in the 800 meter and 1500 meter at the Montville, Conn. Championships on May 5.

Gerry Willis continued his domination of weightlifting, adding the United States Open Natural Weightlifting Championships to his winning record.

The feeling of pride that prevailed at the Sports Award Ceremony was an acknowledgement of the commitment of the administration, coaches, and particularly of the Salve Regina athletes to the growth and success of the Salve Varsity Athletic Program.

Angelo Marinosci, Jr., of the Art Department will be embarking on a two-month photographic tour of northern Japan this summer. Mr. Marinosci plans to tour the five most northern prefectures of Tohoku to document roadside shrines, village life and other aspects of Japanese culture. The northern region of Japan was chosen in order to provide him a more authentic and traditional view of Japan than that experienced by most visiting Westerners.

In addition to his extensive research of Japanese history, geography, art and economics, he has also been learning the Japanese language. Mr. Marinosci has been assisted in his efforts by Kumiko Hosaka, a graduate student in Human Development at Salve who is a native of Fuji-Yoshida, Japan.

Partial funding of this photographic project comes from the Afga-Gevaert Film Company and the Honda Motor Corporation. In addition, Mr. Marinosci has also been awarded a Faculty Development Grant from Salve.
