FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

August 1970

"The Decade of Decision for Dieticians" will be the theme of a two-day meeting of the New England States Dietetic Association this week at Salve Regina College.

Some 250 specialists in dietetics and nutrition at colleges or universities, hospitals, and community or government agencies throughout the six-state region are expected to attend the seminar, which begins Tuesday (Sept 1).

Lectures and group discussions will probe, among other topics, "The Health Care Field Today," "An Internist's Views on Artificial Food Products," and "New Trends in Diet Therapy."

Miss Isabelle Hallahan, the American Dietetic Association's liaison for legislation, will be the main speaker at Tuesday evening's dinner. Her topic will be "Legislation and Public Policy as it Affects the Dietician."

Serving on the seminar committee are Sister Veronica Marie Duffy, R. S. M., director of food services at Salve Regina, and Sister Mary Joannes Griffin, associate professor of home economics at the College.

Registration will be handled by Mrs. Eleanor R. Kovach, West Warwick, secretary-treasurer of the New England Dietetic Association.
