FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

April 1971

Naval War College students and members of the younger generation met in seminar groups today (April 29) at Salve Regina College to discuss "Vietnam, Cambodia, and Global Involvement."

The program, last in a six-part series on "Current Attitudes" sponsored by the Naval War College, involved undergraduates from Salve Regina, Brown University, Pembroke College, and the University of Rhode Island, as well as Naval Officer Candidates and junior officers.

Earlier discussions covered a range of topics including the draft, all volunteer force, drugs, campus unrest, environment, pollution, and national security and priorities.

Each seminar group consists of four students from the Naval War College and four from the participating schools.

Hosting the groups at Salve Regina were the Misses Angela DeOrchis, Cranston; Eileen Janiga, Meriden, Conn.; Marlene Johnston, Thomaston, Conn.; Denise Lajoie, Cumberland; and Christine Luby, Framingham, Mass.
