Write Your Way to Hamilton: Big Ideas for a Changing World

Rhode Island has been a place of many firsts – innovation runs deep in the Ocean State. It's the first place in the modern world to incorporate the revolutionary principle of religious freedom in its governing documents. That idea and the related concept of separation of church and state went on to sweep the world. Today these principles are included in the U.S. Constitution, the Bill of Rights and the United Nations Universal Declaration of Human Rights. Just a little more than one hundred years later, Rhode Islanders changed the world again – this time by starting the Industrial Revolution in America. Last fall the Newport Historical Society challenged Rhode Island's high school sophomores to imagine the future by thinking about the past. In a contest entitled Write your Way to Hamilton: Big Ideas for a Changing World, students were asked to be inspired by Rhode Island's history and write an essay describing what is happening or could happen in their communities that might change the world. All of the essays were thought-provoking, and from them the judges selected winners from each county.

Recognition and prizes included an event at the Statehouse for all entrants and their families, a trip to NYC to see the award-winning Hamilton, An American Musical for all winners, and the publication of two winning essays on the NHS website.
