Salve Regina College and Portsmouth Middle School will present a model program for competency-based teacher education during a day long conference of the Southeastern New England Staff Development Cooperative (SENESDC) at the Portsmouth Middle School on Friday, November 30.

Competency-based teacher education is an experimental method for teaching teachers. It stresses field experience and an evaluation of performance based on a number of specifically defined "competencies." The more traditional forms of teacher education emphasize the theory and philosophy of teaching.

SENESDC is a consortium of schools and colleges whose major purpose is to explore competency-based teacher education. Member schools are:

Salve Regina College
Brown University
R. I. Junior College
R. I. Teacher Center
(State Dept. of Education)
Providence - Mt. Pleasant High

Portsmouth Middle School
Pawtucket - Anna Burns School
Cranston West High School
Providence - Gilbert Stuart Middle
Rhode Island College
Framingham State College
