Salve Regina College will present "Director's Workshop," a trio of plays directed by students in the theater department on Wednesday, December 5, at 7:30 p.m., in the college's Creative Arts Center.

The first offering will be Opening Night by John Crowell. The play deals with a fading Broadway star trying to make a comeback and her struggles to along the way. It is directed by Laurie Maurer.

Maridonna McCarthy directs the second play which is Happy Journey by Thornton Wilder. This depicts the family problems of a proud southern family.

Tennessee William's Something Unspoken winds up the evening with a portrayal of the relationship between an aristocratic woman and her private secretary. It is directed by Pat Cusack.

Admission to "Director's Workshop" is $1.00.
