ATWOOD LECTURESIN
Humanities

MARK PATINKIN WILL SPEAK ON "GOD'S WARS"

The Salve Regina College Atwood Lectures in Humanities will feature columnist Mark Patinkin on Tuesday, February 23 in O'Hare Academic Center at 7:30 p.m.

Patinkin's lecture, "God's Wars: Belfast, India and Beirut," will focus on his experiences when he traveled to Northern Ireland, India and Beirut to do a series of articles on religious violence for the "Providence Journal-Bulletin." The series was one of two finalists from the "Providence Journal" for the 1987 Pulitzer Prize in international reporting.

The lecture is free and open to the public. The Atwood Lectures are supported by a grant from the Oliver S. and Jennie R. Donaldson Charitable Trust. For further information, call Dr. John Coakley at extension 424.
