THEATRE DEPARTMENT TO STAGE COMEDY

Beginning on Nov. 17, the Newport College Theatre Company at Salve Regina will present "Come Blow Your Horn," a comedy by Neil Simon. The Reverend Robert Mitchell, pastor of the United Congregational Church in Middletown, will serve as guest artistic director. Theatre Department Chair, Bernard G. Masterson, asked Reverend Mitchell to be guest director after seeing his work at shows such as "Murder at the Howard Johnson's," which Mitchell directed at the Newport Playhouse. Fr. John Duggan, Priest Counselor at Salve Regina, will act as assistant artistic director.

The cast will include Robert Matteau ('91), Marjorie Santos ('90), J. Paul Wargo ('91), Paul Diomede ('92), Jodie Rufty ('92), Joan Mitchell ('91), and Nancy Miller ('90). Performances will run on November 17, 18 and 19 and December 1, 2 and 3 in Megley Theatre.

HOLISTIC COUNSELING OPEN HOUSE

The Holistic Counseling Graduate Program will hold an open house on Sunday, Nov. 12 from 1-3 p.m. at Wakehurst Campus Center. The meeting is free and open to graduates of the Holistic Counseling Program as well as to students currently enrolled and anyone interested in learning more about this style of counseling. Light refreshments will be served, and faculty will be available to answer questions. For more information, contact the Holistic Counseling Graduate Program office at ext. 250.

SALVE REGINA COLLEGE ANNOUNCES THIRD GRANT FROM WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST FOUNDATION

Salve Regina College has received the third of a series of grants from the William Randolph Hearst Foundation. According to Sister M. Therese Antone, Vice President for Institutional Advancement, "This gift brings the Hearst grants to a total of $75,000. The College has established the William Randolph Hearst Endowment for scholarship aid to minority students."

The William Randolph Hearst Foundation, founded in 1948 by publisher/philanthropist William Randolph Hearst, provides grants for social welfare, education, health care and the arts and humanities. The Foundation has stated its chief priority as funding programs which aid poverty and minority groups.

The Hearst Foundation bestowed an initial grant to the College in 1986 at which time the Salve Regina College commitment to quality education received the praise of foundation executives, Sister Therese added.

Dr. Michael Thombs, Assistant Professor of Information Systems Science, had an article, "Busy Professionals Go To Class the MODEM Way," accepted by Educational Journal. The article was co-authored by Mrs. Beverly Alcott, West Germany, and Mrs. Patricia Saile, Florida. All writing, sharing and editing was done through TYMNET International Network. The authors discuss the impact of telecommunications on the future of education.

Three Salve Regina College professors made presentations at the 1989 Professional Issues Conference sponsored by the Federation of Nurses and Health Professionals. The purpose of the Conference, held at the Sheraton Islander in Newport on Sept. 13, was for nursing personnel to explore future issues in their field.

Dr. Catherine Graziano, Professor of Nursing, presented "Alternatives in Care." Dr. Graziano discussed how the delivery of health care will change by the year 2000. Health care staffing will include more extensive use of computers and robotics, she said. Along with an increased amount of decision making for nurses, there are ethical dilemmas which nurses believe must be clarified. Dr. Macrina Hawkins, and Joan Chapdelaine, both Associate Professors of Nursing, explored "Ethical Crises in Health Care." Some ethical issues included when a living will should be used.

Dr. Catherine E. Graziano, Professor of Nursing, has been awarded the Nurse Educator Recognition Award by the Rhode Island State Nurses' Association on Oct. 20. Dr. Graziano is the first recipient of the award. Dr. Graziano was also elected to a two-year term as a member of the Board of Directors for the Rhode Island State Nurses' Association. On Nov. 10, Dr. Graziano will participate in a panel discussion, "Survival in the 1990's," a program sponsored by Sigma Theta Tau, the National Nursing Honor Society, Delta Epsilon Chapter, at the Inn at the Crossing in Warwick.
