WOMAN MARINE OFFICER SELECTION
OFFICER AT SALVE REGINA COLLEGE

FRIDAY
FEBRUARY 11, 1966

Junior and senior women can find out about interesting career possibilities in the Marine Corps on Wednesday, February 16, 1966. Lieutenant Carol A. Ray, Woman Marine Officer Selection Officer, will be in the Miley Hall foyer of Salve Regina College on that day to answer questions on requirements and opportunities for women interested in becoming officers in the United States Marine Corps.

Some of the many areas in which a Woman Marine Officer may be assigned are ground aviation, office management, journalism, data processing, personnel management, merchandising, education, recreation, accounting, law, language and others. Included in the assignments are opportunities for overseas duty.

Qualified students may obtain applications from Lieutenant Ray for the Woman Officer Candidate Course which will be conducted at Quantico, Virginia next summer. Those who are accepted and successfully complete the course at the end of the summer will receive commissions as second lieutenants, if they have fulfilled requirements for a degree, or whenever they fulfill those requirements.

Students who are unable to see Lieutenant Ray at this time may receive information by writing to: Woman Marine Officer Selection Officer, 200 Summer Street, Boston, Massachusetts 02110.
