DIRECTOR OF COMPUTER SERVICES NAMED AT SALVE REGINA - THE NEWPORT COLLEGE

Sister Sheila Megley, provost, announces the appointment of Sister Roselina McKillop as director of computer services at Salve Regina - The Newport College.

In this newly created position, Sister Roselina is responsible for coordinating the needs of several administrative offices with the capabilities of the College's computer facilities. This coordination will prove invaluable in terms of availability of essential data in all aspects of the College's administration, given the growth of the College over the past several years. Sister Roselina will oversee all phases of conversion of many administrative functions to more efficient and cost effective computer-based operations. This will include training of College staff.

Sister Roselina McKillop is from Chicago, Ill., where she served for many years as administrator/principal in the Archdiocesan school system. Her background includes, in addition to administrative experience, teaching experience at the college, secondary and elementary levels. She holds a master of arts degree in mathematics/education from St. Xavier College, in Chicago, and has completed postgraduate work at Rosary College, Northwestern University, University of Illinois, Loyola University and Notre Dame University.
