SALVE REGINA COLLEGE

Dear Students:

How exciting to come together for the fall semester at Salve Regina—always a superb season on our Newport campus. The crisp air, the turning leaves, and the sunlit lawns help set the scene for renewing old friendships and exploring new studies.

The opening of classes spells a fresh beginning, the chance to make a strong start on an academic year of solid achievement. Resolve now to make the most of the countless opportunities to expand your minds, to hone your talents, and, through your thoughtfulness and courtesy, to contribute to the warm family spirit of our Salve Regina community.

In welcoming you to start anew, I wish you all the joy of a great adventure in learning. May this year become for you a giant step forward in fulfilling all your dreams and ambitions.

Yours sincerely,

Sister Lucille

Lucille McKillop, R.S.M.
President

Sisters Mark Annual Mercy Day

The Salve Regina College community will join all Sisters of Mercy in celebrating Mercy Day on September 24, marking 147 years of service in education, health care and social service in the United States.

The Sisters of Mercy have over 20,000 members worldwide with 9,000 sisters in the United States. Outside the United States, the religious order operates missions in Jamaica, Argentina, Belize, Guatemala, Honduras, Australia, Great Britain, Ireland and New Zealand.

The Sisters of Mercy had its roots in Ireland. In the early 1800s young Catherine McAuley had observed the poverty running rampant amid a flourishing privileged class. The horse-drawn carriages of the well-to-do wheeled through the streets of

Sailing to Self-Confidence at Salve Regina College

Dan Wilson (left), sailing instructor, unravels some of the kinks of knot-tying during this summer's pilot sailing program, the newest segment of the Learning Unlimited program at Salve Regina.

Kathryn Rok, Director of Learning Unlimited and Assistant Professor of Special Education at the College, initiated the adventurous program with funding from the John E. Fogarty Foundation and in cooperation with Shake-A-Leg, a local organization serving victims of physical trauma. "With sailboats specially designed for the physically challenged, they were looking for other groups serving the disabled which could use them, so it was a mutually beneficial program," said Rok.

Sailors-to-be from the Maher Center, a local educational and workshop center for developmentally disabled adults, and from the community at large have set sail from Fort Adams in Newport Harbor on morning cruises in July and August.

Sailboats skimming along the water are an everyday sight in Newport, R.I., but if you could "zoom in" on a custom-designed 20-foot "Freedom Independence" you would sight a singular crew. Handling the tiller and lines are a pair of developmentally disabled adults under the direction of a seasoned, but physically challenged, sailor who is assisted by a student volunteer from Salve Regina College. All are participants in a pilot sailing program sponsored by Learning Unlimited, a living skills educational center for exceptional adults based at Salve Regina College.

Reunion '90

Reunion Weekend, set for October 12, 13 and 14, is fast approaching. The classes of '55, '60, '65, '70, '75, '80 and '85 will be visiting the campus for a weekend of reliving memories, seeing old friends, catching up with new happenings and pondering where the years have gone. Events throughout the weekend are sure to keep Salve Regina alumni hopping!

Sr. Ann Nelson Wins Teaching Excellence and Leadership Award

Sister Ann Nelson (right), Professor of Politics, welcomes a group of Russian students to Salve Regina during a 1987 cultural-exchange tour of American campuses. Sister Ann was recently selected as winner of a Sears-Roebuck Foundation "Teaching Excellence and Campus Leadership Award" for her excellence in teaching which has guided her students — to tour the world, to win national honors and to attain state and national internships.

Sr. Ann Nelson, Professor of Politics at Salve Regina, was selected as the winner of a Sears-Roebuck Foundation "Teaching Excellence and Campus Leadership Award."

She is one of nearly 700 faculty members being recognized nationally by The Sears-Roebuck Foundation for resourcefulness and leadership as a private college educator.

The program is administered nationally by the Foundation for Independent Higher Education in Stamford, Conn.

"We salute Sears in recognizing one of society's most fundamental needs, excellence in teaching," said John P. Blessington, President of the Foundation for Independent Higher Education. "The college educators who receive these grants have a commitment to learning that inspires and motivates students to excel. They are one of our nation's most important and finest resources."

Sr. Ann Nelson received her award for her devotion to engaging the energies and enthusiasms of

SRC Welcomes Nine New Full-Time Faculty Members

Mr. George L. "Andy" Andrade Jr. has been appointed Assistant Professor of Physical Education. Andy joined the College staff as an Admissions Counselor in 1983. Since then he has held several administrative staff positions, including Assistant Director of Admissions and Director of Sports Information. He holds a master's degree from the University of New Haven and a bachelor of arts degree from Eckerd College in Florida.

Mr. Ronald W. Atkins, former Director of Residence and College Activities, joins the full-time faculty as Assistant Professor of Management. He holds a master of arts degree from Salve Regina and a Bachelor of Arts in Political Science from Roger Williams College. Mr. Atkins is a 26-year Navy career veteran who served a four-year tour of duty as Director of Support Services at the Naval War College.

Sr. Mary Maurice Boyle, R.S.M., joins the faculty as Professor of Mathematics. She holds a Bachelor of Arts in Mathematics from Villanova, a Master of Science in Physics from Catholic University of America and a Ph.D. in Physics and Biophysics from St. Thomas Institute of Advanced Study in Cincinnati, Ohio.

Mr. Michael J. Chille has been named an Instructor in Human Development and Administrative Aide to the Director of the Human Development Program. He holds a bachelor of arts degree from Providence College, a master of education degree from Rhode Island College, and is a Ph.D. candidate at the University of Rhode Island. For the past decade, Mr. Chille has established a private practice in Newport as a psychotherapist and organizational consultant.

Dr. Robert V. Girasole joins the full-time faculty as Assistant Professor of Management. A graduate of La Salle Academy, Providence, he received an A.B. degree in Microbiology at the University of Connecticut and his doctorate in dental surgery from West Virginia University after which he did a three-year internship and residency in oral surgery at Johns Hopkins. After a successful, but brief, career in dentistry, Dr. Girasole turned to a career in Investment Management. He received an M.B.A. in Finance from Bryant College and taught graduate courses part-time at Salve Regina.

Dr. Robin Lynn Hoffman has been named Assistant Professor of Administration of Justice. For the past two years she taught part-time at Salve Regina. Dr. Hoffman attended Syracuse University, received a Bachelor of Arts in Psychology from New York University and a Juris Doctor from Rutgers University. She is a member of the American Bar Association Sections of Criminal Justice and Legal Education.

Ms. Katherine M. Kranz joins the Social Work Department as Instructor of Social Work. A graduate of the University of Rhode Island, she holds a master's degree in Social Work from Rhode Island College. Ms. Kranz is a substance abuse therapist for Rhode Island Group Health Association.

Dr. Juliette L. Relihan joins us as Assistant Professor of Education. She holds a Ph.D. from Fordham University, a master of science degree from Hunter College and a Bachelor of Science in Elementary Education from Fordham University.

Mr. Lawrence H. Sullivan has been appointed Instructor of Liberal Studies. For the past two years he was a part-time graduate faculty member at Salve Regina. Mr. Sullivan holds a bachelor of science degree from Boston College and a master of science degree from the University of Bridgeport.

Have you ever had difficulty reaching someone at the College? Don't despair. You can now leave a message 24 hours a day, seven days a week on the new phone system.

Installed by Northern Telecom, the new units will "bring the College into the next century with the technology it needs," according to Jeanne Spinosa, Director of Telecommunications.

Salve Regina needed new telephones; the old system had run out of room for new extensions and provided no way to expand as the College developed. The Northern Telecom phones link the College with the outside world through access to external computer networks and smoother, more effective telephone communications. It consists of fiber optics technology, which transmits information at the speed of light. In addition to connecting Salve Regina with the greater community, the devices will unite all buildings, students, faculty and staff, making communication more efficient. Delays will be minimized because callers can dial extensions directly. Callers unsure of an extension number can still reach an operator during regular business hours. After business hours, the Security Office will provide assistance. Other advantages include four times the previous number of phone lines, allowing rapid transmittal of calls.

The Northern Telecom SL1 system provides each user with an authorization code to gain entry into the system for long-distance billing purposes. It also offers an answering machine called a "voice mailbox." All faculty and staff have access to this service. On-campus students also have their own phones, extension numbers and voice mailboxes. All off-campus students, including commuters, have access to a voice mailbox. They can receive or leave messages from any touch-tone phone. In addition, the voice mailbox eliminates confusion about when a message was left; it "stamps" the message with the date and time received.

According to Spinosa, reaction to the new telephones has been mostly positive. "People have their own reaction to new things; some have a positive approach, and some are a little bit more reluctant. For the most part, it's been good," she said.

The Telecommunications staff, which has grown from one to four since the installation in March, is assembling policies and procedures and working out last-minute kinks. "Some days it feels overwhelming," Spinosa smiled, "but most of the time it feels pretty good."

Master of Education Program for Certified Teachers

Dr. William Burrell (left), Vice President/Dean of Graduate Studies, and Mark Dray, Director of Graduate Admissions, respond to a fresh idea in a planning meeting for the new Master of Education program for certified teachers.

Like the pupils in their own classrooms, a group of teachers went back to school as students in September. They are enrolled in the new Master of Education program at Salve Regina, designed exclusively for certified educators to meet specific needs as they seek professional career development.

The program took shape in response to a needs assessment survey of over 2,000 New England educators. These educators indicated that they not only needed help in teaching the basics of reading, writing, math and science but also guidance in helping children and families affected by substance abuse and child abuse. In keeping with its mission "to educate for service to others," the College rose to the challenge of the teachers' expressed needs by developing the unique, practical and creative graduate program.

The new M.Ed. program presents contemporary teaching methods and integrated approaches to the basics, along with the personal and societal issues which cloud the air of today's classrooms. Flexibility allows candidates to select courses to meet both personal and professional needs. And, as educators' needs evolve, so will the program.

The 36 credit hour program opens with "Introductory Research Seminar" and closes with "Final Project/Research Paper Seminar," the two required courses. Other courses offered this fall include "Contemporary Approaches to Teaching Reading and Writing Across the Curriculum" taught by Dr. Camille Allen. It examines the relationship between process reading and writing and presents reading strategies. "Substance Abuse: Information, Detection, Treatment and Prevention," taught by Dr. Stephen Clifford, is designed to prepare elementary and secondary educators for dealing with the problems of troubled youth in relation to substance abuse and to familiarize students with drug information, drug detection and treatment, and drug prevention.

For a brochure and admissions information, contact Mark Dray, Director of Graduate Admissions, or David Pedro, Associate Director of Graduate Admissions at 847-6650, ext. 2908.

Brother Robert Speaks in Asia on Teaching Improvement

Brother Robert Daszkiewicz, Director of Instructional Development, presented his paper, "The Teaching Improvement Process," at the 39th World Assembly of the International Council on Education for Teaching last month in Singapore.

Brother Robert also presented his paper and spoke on the Office of Instructional Development at the La Salle Brothers' annual educational conference in Singapore, the Christian Brothers summer seminar in Hong Kong, and to the faculty of De La Salle College in Manila, Philippines.

The Teaching Improvement Process Brother Robert spoke on is an instructional tool at the College which offers assistance to all faculty interested in self-evaluation or mastery of more advanced, creative skills. It is a confidential, systematic process for teaching improvement based on the needs of the individual faculty member.

Travelers Alert!

A cruise to the Panama Canal with stops in Acapulco, Costa Rica, Aruba and Curacao is planned for Jan. 2-11, 1991 aboard the Golden Odyssey. Deposits for the trip must be made by Oct. 15 to receive a 25% fare discount. The cost of the cruise, $1,845, includes roundtrip air fare to Acapulco, a special cocktail party onboard, a group photo and other special events.

There will be an additional trip offered in 1991 which will embrace England, Scotland, Wales and Ireland. It is projected for July 24 to Aug. 8, 16 wondrous days for only $1,795 (subject to price adjustments). The planned itinerary will include London, Bristol, and South Wales to Waterford and Tralee, then on to Ennis, Dublin and Llangollen in North Wales, Grasmere and the Lake District, Edinburgh, York and Worcester, and then return to London. The trip price includes first class hotels, private deluxe motorcoach and many meals.

Those interested in either of these trips should contact Sr. Ann Nelson by mail at Salve Regina College or by calling 847-6650, ext. 3143 and leave the request for the brochure on the answering machine. Be sure to leave full directions as to the number of brochures desired and where they should be sent.

Dr. Prudence Croke, R.S.M., Professor of Religious Studies, recently presented a paper on "Mercy as Sacrament" at the Mercy Association in Scripture and Theology's annual meeting held in Burlingame, California. Sister Prudence also attended the annual convention of the Catholic Theological Society of America which took place in San Francisco.

Dr. Karen Dobson, Religious Studies Department Chair, has been appointed an Advisory Board Member of the Master of Arts Educational and Pastoral Ministry programs at Emmanuel College in Boston.

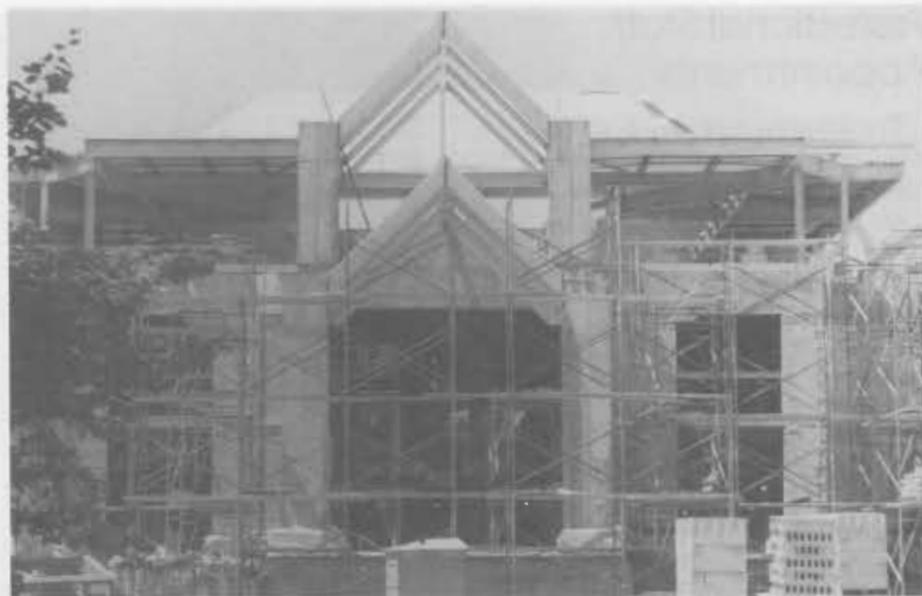

Before coming to Salve Regina, Dr. Dobson was the Program Director for the Emmanuel College MA Internship Program which was conducted throughout the Archdiocese of Boston.

Dr. James Hersh, Professor of Philosophy, will lecture on the subject of ethnicity and nationalism in the U.S.S.R. to the Institute of Ethnology in Moscow next summer. Dr. Hersh will also have two previously published papers, "From Ethnos to Polis: The Furies and Apollo" and "Enthroning the Furies in Germany" translated into Russian. Next year, he will go on sabbatical to do research on 20th century aesthetic philosophy at Oxford University in England.

Brian Holliday, a senior majoring in psychology and Spanish, has received a scholarship from the Kahlil Gibran Education Fund, Inc. The fund is a Massachusetts charitable corporation established under the will of Mary K. Gibran to honor the memory of her late brother Kahlil Gibran, world renowned artist, poet and author of "The Prophet." Holliday is one of 44 people throughout the country receiving this scholarship assistance.

Dr. Elaine N. Mayer, Professor of Anthropology, attended national conferences recently with topics ranging from ancient Mayan culture to state-of-the-art technology in the future of education. She attended the 8th Annual Maya Weekend at the University of Pennsylvania, a meeting at which Mayanists, experts on Mayan culture, meet to discuss new discoveries about the ancient culture. Dr. Mayer also attended a meeting of the National School Boards Association at which she participated in workshops on technological advances which will impact schools, libraries and museums in the next decade.

Dr. Lucille McKillop, R.S.M., President of Salve Regina College, has been appointed to the Board of Trustees of Mount Aloysius Junior College in Cresson, Pa. for a term which will run until the annual meeting in 1992. Sister Lucille is recognized for her creative leadership in the fields of curriculum development and college management.

Construction of the new library progresses. The sandy gray rock-face granite exterior and lead-coated copper roof will echo turn-of-the-century design prevalent in buildings around campus. The entrance of polished granite in two shades of gray will pave the way to gray and dark blue carpeted floors and stairways. Traditional upholstered furniture, dark stained oak tables, barrister chairs, shelving and trim will harmonize with the historic character throughout the College.

Golf Tournament Tees Off

On September 27, 1990 Salve Regina College will host its first annual golf tournament at the Newport Country Club. Proceeds of the tournament will be used to purchase books for the new library.

All members of the College community are welcome to participate. For more information contact Michael Semenza, Associate Vice President of Development, 847-6650, ext. 2150.

Each boat is skippered by a Shake-A-Leg instructor, who may be physically impaired, and crewed by a pair of developmentally disabled students who are assisted by a Salve Regina volunteer. The four Salve Regina volunteers were: Annie Sabo '90, of Prospect Conn., a special elementary education major, who will be student teaching this fall; Michelle Peirson '93, of Middletown, R.I.; Jane Stevenson '90, of Jamestown, R.I., and Kristen Whalen '90, of Providence, R.I.

The crew learn to rig the boat, "read" the wind, follow boating rules, name the parts of the boat and use nautical terms, while following safety measures such as wearing life vests. Volunteer Annie Sabo recalls, "At first I couldn't really imagine how the students would function in this new activity. I wondered how much they could learn, but after a short time they were really sailing—getting the hang of tacking and jibing. It's such an experiential thing—so exciting!"

Beyond the surge in confidence which comes from learning a new skill, the developmentally disabled students improve their social behavior. "Sailing teaches them teamwork, that they need to work together, that cooperation leads to achievement. Two women smoothed out what had been a rough relationship by working together in the same boat," explained Rok.

Robie Pierce, Director of the Shake-A-Leg Sailing Program, is also enthusiastic about the new offshoot program. A Marion, Mass. native who grew up sailing like most kids, the competitive sailor and sailboat marketing executive was struck by multiple sclerosis. Pierce reflected "I knew how therapeutic sailing was for me, so I thought it would be for other disabled persons, too. I decided that I wanted to devote a part of my life to helping others." He went on, "The developmentally disabled group are doing something they never dreamed of doing—sailing on Narragansett Bay. That boosts their self-esteem." He added that the sailing program promotes a sense of fraternity, teamwork and cooperation which carry over into the students' everyday lives.

Directors, instructors, volunteers and student sailors of the Salve Regina pilot sailing program praise its value for the sense of achievement to the participants and the spirit of service which ripples out to this island community.

Anthropology Department Adds Depth and Breadth

The Anthropology Department at Salve Regina College has added a concentration in archaeology to the anthropology major, and in conjunction with the Spanish Department offers a two-and-a-half week course in Mexico next January. Students will have the opportunity to participate in archaeological digs.

Dr. Elaine Mayer, Chair of the Anthropology Department and Dr. Jane Bethune, Assistant Professor of the Spanish Program at the College, coordinators of the field and classroom program in Oaxaca, Mexico, state that the students will earn credits in anthropology and Spanish which can be applied to meet requirements in either major.

For more information on the program, contact Dr. Elaine Mayer at 847-6650, ext. 3168.

Professional Staff Appointments

The following professional staff members have recently joined the Salve Regina College community.

Mr. John Quinn joins the Office of the Dean of Students as Assistant Dean of Students for Off-Campus Life. John graduated from the University of Rhode Island with a Bachelor of Arts in English and received a master's degree in Personnel and Counseling in Higher Education. John formerly worked in Boston and New York with disadvantaged and gifted children as both a teacher and administrator.

Mr. Robert Walsh has been named Coordinator of Alumni Relations. Rob is a 1989 graduate of Salve Regina and a founding member of Students Toward Alumni Relations Today (START). He was formerly employed in the Office of Public Information.

Mr. Gerry Willis has been appointed Director of College Activities. Gerry, a 1986 graduate of Salve Regina, distinguished himself as an undergraduate student by winning two national collegiate weightlifting titles and seven New England wrestling titles. He has worked as a corporate representative for Shawmut Bank in Boston.

Ms. Martha Young joins the Office of Public Information as Public Information Officer. A 1986 graduate of Salve Regina, she was formerly employed as a newswriter for The Patriot Ledger in Quincy, Mass.

Look for other professional staff appointments in upcoming issues of the News Bulletin.

thousands of students in exploring their social and political heritage.

A keen scholar and a tireless traveler, Sister Ann earned her Ph.D. in Political Philosophy from Fordham University. She brings to her classes a wealth of hard-won knowledge, along with first-hand experience on the international scene.

Beyond her classroom contributions, Sister Ann has been vigorously involved in promoting high standards and innovative programs. The rapid emergence of Salve Regina College as a celebrated center of higher learning is largely the work of dedicated scholars such as Sister Ann Nelson. She has motivated students to achieve such national honors as the Harry S. Truman Scholarship Award and the Dr. Moses Leo Gitelson Essay Award presented by the Center for the Study of the Presidency.

Sister Ann has been generous with her talents and expertise in supporting cultural projects on community, state and national levels. Many of Sister Ann's students, following their professor's example of civic duty, have become actively involved in community, state and national politics. Under her guidance, Sister Ann's students have been selected for Washington internships in the offices of Senator Claiborne Pell and U.S. House of Representatives Robert Tiernan, Edward Beard and Claudine Schneider. Additionally, her students have served internships for the state and in local government.

Department to Host Seminar on the Prevention of Physical Problems for Musicians

The Salve Regina Music Department, in conjunction with the Rhode Island String Teachers Association, will sponsor a seminar on the "Prevention of Physical Problems for Musicians" Sept. 22 at Cecilia Hall.

The seminar will feature a panel discussion moderated by Professor John Dempsey of the University of Rhode Island. Panelists will include Dr. Fred Hochberg, Founder and Director of the Massachusetts General Hospital Music Medicine Clinic in Boston; Henry Sisun, a Physical Therapist and Director of the Rhode Island Rehabilitation Institute; Edna Golansky, Co-founder and Associate Music Director of the Dorothy Taubman School of Piano and the Amherst Music Festival, and Sara Bartner, a certified Alexander Technique teacher based in Providence.

Topics to be discussed by the panel include types of physical problems musicians are prone to develop, how to prepare and strengthen muscles for the demands of performing, the proper use of body, awareness of possible injury symptoms and current possible treatments. A question and answer period will follow the discussion. All musicians and educators are invited to attend.

The seminar will be held from 10:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Reserved seating is available for $5. Tickets at the door are $7. Seating is limited. For reservations and information, contact the Salve Regina Music Department at 847-6650 ext. 2945.

Sister M. Therese Antone chats with members of the Major Superiors of Men during their conference at Salve Regina in August. More than 30 organizations used the facilities and campus of the College for meetings and conventions during the summer.

Priest to Give Sermons on Poor of the Caribbean

Food For the Poor, a non-profit, charitable trust organized in Florida, will be the topic of sermons given at Masses held at Salve Regina College during the weekend of September 29-30. Fr. Peter J. Hereley, O.P., will relate the charitable work being done by Food For the Poor in the Caribbean. He will also visit with members of the College community after the 6:30 p.m. Mass on Sunday, Sept. 30.

Fr. Peter recently returned from a missionary trip to Haiti and Jamaica. He will tour the United States throughout the year to describe conditions in those areas.

Food For the Poor seeks to improve the health, economic and social conditions of the indigent of Haiti, Jamaica and some of the smaller islands in the Caribbean. Food For the Poor also provides spiritual support and instruction.

Masses will take place in the Chapel at Ochre Court on the College campus at 5 p.m. on Saturday, Sept. 29, 11 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. on Sunday, Sept. 30. For more information, contact Diane Comerford in the Campus Ministry Office at 847-6650, ext. 2326.

Mercy Day

Dublin—streets filled with children, undernourished and clad in rags. They could not attend school, nor could their ailing or destitute parents provide the physical and spiritual care needed for their healthy growth.

When Catherine received an inheritance, she used her windfall to open Mercy House in Dublin in 1827, a shelter for poor Irish women. She also established elementary schools for poor children, secondary schools for the middle class and a resident home for young working girls. In addition, she visited the sick in their homes and in hospitals.

Soon joined by other women who shared her spiritual and social reform quest, Catherine and her helpers became the first Sisters of Mercy. They took vows of service to God and dedicated themselves to the poor, the sick and the uneducated.

In 1843, the first Mercy Foundation in America was established. From one center in Pittsburgh, Pa., the Sisters of Mercy moved about the country founding hospitals, schools and hubs of community service.

After establishing their place in health care, social services and secondary education in Rhode Island, the Sisters of Mercy introduced another chapter of education with the first class to enter Salve Regina College in 1947.

To the present day, the order has continued its commitment, achievement and recognition in humanitarian endeavors. The Sisters of Mercy recently received the 1990 Variety Clubs International Humanitarian Award. Sister Patricia Clare Sullivan, R.S.M. (Omaha), Chief Executive Officer of Mercy Hospital Medical Center in Des Moines, helped introduce their Variety Clubs to the works of Sisters of Mercy worldwide. Presented annually to an individual or group that "has shown unusual understanding, empathy and devotion" to humanity, the Humanitarian Award has been presented to only one other group in its 60-year history—the Salvation Army. Individual award winners have included Paul-Emile Cardinal Leger, Danny Kaye, Dr. Jonas Salk and Dr. Albert Schweitzer. Stanley J. Reynolds, president of Variety Clubs International, praised this year's winners, "We are proud to pay homage to the Sisters of Mercy, worldwide citizens who have demonstrated their dedication to the cause of humanity, and devoted their lives to making this wonderful world a better place to live in."

Members of the Sisters of Mercy at Salve Regina have also received recognition for recent achievements. Sr. Lucille McKillop, President of the College, was appointed to a three-year term on the Commission on Financing Higher Education of the National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities. Sr. Ann Nelson, Professor of Politics at Salve Regina, was selected as a winner of a Sears-Roebuck Foundation "Teaching Excellence and Campus Leadership Award" for her devotion to engaging thousands of students in exploring their social and political heritage.
